

Bursa Malaysia's volatility likely to surge next week

KUALA LUMPUR, Dec 11 -- The heightened volatility that have emerged surrounding the emergence of the Omicron variant is expected to persist next week, said Rakuten Trade Sdn Bhd vice-president of equity research Thong Pak Leng.

Following this, he reckons that the barometer FTSE Bursa Malaysia KLCI (FBM KLCI) may not see any major movements thus anticipating it to trend within the 1,490-1,500 range.

"Technically, we shall see immediate support level at 1,485 with resistance at 1,515," he told Bernama.

Thong said investors also may exhibit a wait-and-see attitude ahead of the release of US inflation data that might influence Federal Reserve decision on when to roll back economic stimulus.

The Federal Open Market Committee meeting will be held on Wednesday.

European Central Bank, Bank of England, Bank of Japan and the People's Bank of China will also hold respective meetings during the week.

Domestically, window dressing activities may still emerge next week ahead of the end of the year.

Overall, the market was mixed before ending the week on a negative note.

It hit a 13-month low on Monday on fears over Omicron's possible impact on global economic recovery.

The World Health Organisation said the Omicron coronavirus variant is now present in 57 countries, causing more countries to impose stricter movement restrictions to curb the spread.

Sentiment was also hurt by Evergrande's debt crisis. It was officially declared in default on Thursday.

At home, Industrial Production Index (IPI) rose to 5.5 per cent in October 2021, driven by the manufacturing index, which saw an increase of 8.0 per cent in the month under review.
