Halfway to the SDGs Conference – Lessons from the South

The Conference marked the midpoint for the achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). The agenda focused on lessons from the Global South for the realisation of the goals in the final half of the SDG period. This included keynote addresses from leading researchers from sub-Saharan Africa and South Asia on how research evidence-informed policy can advance development. Recognising the interconnections between the SDGs, the conference included three cross-cutting themes which have been strategic priorities for Cambridge Global Challenges and their partners: addressing the challenges of climate adaptation, priorities for young people and work, and the impact of the COVID pandemic on achievement of the SDGs.
